

Last Week In Innovative Mobility

October 15 - 21, 2018

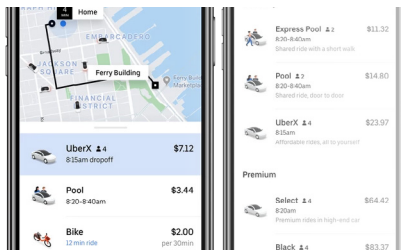

RIDESOURCING/TNCs

Lyft launches its All-Access subscription plan across the U.S. Lyft has tested various versions of the All-Access plan since March 2018. The plan now costs $299 per month for 30 rides of up to $15 each. If a ride costs over $15, the user pays the difference. If a user takes over 30 rides, additional rides are discounted at five percent.

SHARED AUTOMATED VEHICLES

Yandex launches a shared automated vehicle (AV) service in Moscow, Russia. Two AVs will initially operate in the Skolkovo district. Users can request a ride from an AV through the Yandex.Taxi app. A safety monitor will be present in the passenger seat for all rides. This expansion follows Yandex's shared AV service launch in Innopolis in August 2018.

RIDESOURCING/TNCs

Uber offers personalized ride recommendations through its app. Uber will suggest distinct services depending on a user's destination, trip time, and personal ride history. Options will include JUMP electric bikes, uberPOOL, and Express POOL, among the company's other services. Uber will also consider in-house traffic estimations when suggesting modes.

COURIER NETWORK SERVICE

Postmates expands its on-demand delivery service to 134 additional U.S. cities. Postmates is now available in 550 cities across the U.S. The logistics company is currently valued at about $1.2 billion.

SHARED AUTOMATED VEHICLES

Drive.ai launches a shared AV pilot in Arlington, Texas. Three AVs will run on several routes through Arlington, stopping at designated kiosks. People can sign up to use the service at the kiosks or through Drive.ai's app. The pilot will last for one year.

Visit imr.berkeley.edu to sign up for our weekly newsletters!
Follow us on Twitter @InnovMobility

Innovative Mobility Research (IMR) focuses on the future of mobility and is based at the Transportation Sustainability Research Center at the University of California, Berkeley

